

GMHS Sometimes Gets Something Wrong!
Dorothy Granberry, Geneva Miller Historical Society

In the June 30, 2021 article that focused on the Haywood County family created by Tom and Eliza Stubbs there were two inaccuracies. It seems that Mr. Frank Stubbs and Ms. Zelma had five, not four, offsprings. The name of the oldest child, Nola Jean Stubbs, was omitted. The second correction is that Antoinette who graduated Carver High School in the 1950s is still alive, living in Wisconsin amidst the family she created there.

To any reader who has a story of how your family came to be in Haywood County, GMHS would like to receive a copy of your story. Send the story electronically to GMHS at dgrnbrry@aol.com OR send it by the United States Postal Service to GMHS, c/o Dorothy Granberry, 623 Biggs Avenue, Frederick, MD 21702.

In case readers have forgotten, the Geneva Miller Historical Society (GMHS) was created in 2014 to collect, document, and preserve activities and histories of all people and communities in Haywood County with a special focus on the many untold stories of African American communities and life.

GMHS was named in honor of Ms. Geneva Miller, a teacher at Haywood County Training and Carver High School from the 1930s (might be 1920s) through the 1960s. Ms. Miller who was the daughter of Ms. Ola and Mr. Titus Reeves of Stanton expected and demanded the best from her students. She set a high, but attainable, bar for her students to meet. GMHS tries to live up to this ideal she inculcated in so many of the boys and girls she taught over her long career.
